

ABSTRACT

Disclosed are immunologically active antibodies directed against the CD20 antigen, as well as host cells comprising nucleic acid sequences encoding the light chains and heavy chains of immunologically active antibodies and methods of using such host cells to make purified antibodies. The antibodies are useful for treating and diagnosing B cell disorders.